

Heritage interest

Selby is a vibrant market town with a special historic and architectural character that reflects a combination of its religious, commercial, and industrial history, experienced through the dominance of both the Abbey and the Flour Mill over the skyline. On the ground, the small plots of its medieval layout and 18th and 19th century shopping frontages, gives this same character at the more personal level, and this is a character that needs a bit of care and revitalisation.

Can you identify historic uses and heritage assets of the area in its layout today? Are there specific features on the street that maybe illustrate possible historic uses of the area?

Eg. Market Place, Church or churchyard, High Street?

Using the table below: List what you can see and mark its location on the map provided using the number in the table.
