

6. Supporting people with autism through key life changes

autism matters

What we said we would do

We said we would provide more support to people with autism when they were going through big changes in their lives, such as becoming an adult.

What we did

- Developed a new approach to supporting young people moving from Children and Young People's Services to Health and Adult Services.
- Improved the transition from primary to secondary school for children with autism

What we still need to do

- Finish implementing the new approach to transitions from Children and Young People's Services to Health and Adult Services.
